SHARING ADVENTURES IN GENEALOGY: INTERVIEWS WITH MEMBERS OF THE GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY OF WASHTENAW COUNTY
(Part Five)

By Marcia McCrary

In this issue of Capers, we are asking genealogy-related questions of three members of the GSWC. Selected to be interviewed for this issue were: Jerome Drummond, Rob Steward, and Sheila Most. Unlike the previous versions, we are keeping the replies from each person together. Let us know if you like this better than having the answers sorted by each question.

Jerome Drummond

When did you start researching your ancestors and what made you interested on genealogy?

When I was a young boy I lived in rural southern Wisconsin on a farm for a time. My parents were not very sociable, the nearest farms were a half mile away, and I had been an "unexpected baby", so my sister and brothers were much older than me; consequently, outside of school recess, I had no children to play with and spent all of my time with adults. My peer group is not really people born in the 1950s, but rather people born between 1900 and 1930 and nothing to me is more difficult than sitting in a roomful of people my own age because we have nothing in common. It is only natural that I have an interest in those who came before me and that is why I am dedicated to writing family history, which I began formally in 1983. That is how I started.

I majored in history in college and have been studying it ever since. I thought I wanted to be a history teacher in public school for a few years, enough time to finance a master's degree, and then teach history at the junior college level. Fortunately for me this didn't happen. Unlike people who earned advanced degrees and worked for universities I've never been hemmed in by a narrow field of study, constrained by ideologies, nor burdened with endless committee work. I can study and write about history any way that I wish — I am comparatively free.

I have never had an ambition to be a genealogist, I simply use genealogical methods to find materials for writing history; my main work with my family history is all about writing.

What is the most surprising thing you've discovered in researching your genealogy? How did that discovery affect the way you view genealogy and did it have an effect on your attitude toward research?

The most surprising feature of my family history is that my first known ancestor in the United States settled in Ypsilanti. My wife and I came from up north and moved to Ann Arbor in 1983 after she had graduated from the University of Michigan School of Library Science. We stayed in the area because my wife got a job at the Ypsilanti District Library, and we bought a house in Ypsilanti Township in 1992. When we moved, one of my aunts informed me that she could remember hearing that our family had had relatives in Ypsilanti in the past, and indeed we did. My great-great-grandmother Eliza Deegan purchased property on the Chicago Road (now known as Michigan Avenue) in 1856 from Arden Ballard, a local entrepreneur. On 8 October 2023, I attended a meeting of the Ypsilanti Historical Society which, on account of road construction, met at the Ladies Literary Club. The club's meeting house was once the home of the same Arden Ballard – I was standing in his house 167 years after Eliza made her purchase. If I were to create a flowchart of all known points of decision in the lives of my ancestors which had to line up just so for me to be standing in Arden Ballard's home it would seem impossible that it should happen. This is not however strange to me as it fits a kind of pattern in my life. Some people notice similar patterns in their lives which they ascribe to kharma, déjà vu, callings from God, and other ideas that could be labeled supernatural. Although I always think of myself as a rationalist I do not reject such ideas out of hand; supernatural means only outside of our conceptions of nature. It seems to me often that my ancestors wish to be found.

Below is a transcription of a land sale to Eliza Deegan from Arden Ballard and his wife in 1856. In the Appendices of my family history I reproduce many supporting or interesting documents. Sometimes I transcribe them to make them more legible.

In the time you've been doing genealogy, what is the worst brick wall you've encountered? Have you yet been able to work through it or around it? If so, how did you get "unstuck"?

I wrote an article for Family History Capers this past year about my worst roadblock in research and it is the same today— how and when exactly did my great-grandfather Drummond come to America and did he have a connection to the American Civil War. I expect that it will only be resolved with the publication of some new record group,

Tell us about your most gloriously successful moment in researching your genealogy.

One of my favorite moments in genealogy is when I found where my Wellington County, Ontario ancestors had lived and I made a road trip there by myself. So many times when I visit the spot where the ancestor lived there is nothing left – heck, most of the businesses I have worked in over the course of my life have been demolished. But on a lovely day in 1996 I was driving down the Eramosa Road outside of Guelph, Ontario when I saw my great-great-grandfather James Talbot's home, where my great-grandmother Martha Talbot was given away as a bride in 1861. It was a lovely cottage built of limestone, [Ed: see photo below] just as it looked when it replaced the original log cabin. That process was told in the property tax records that the local library kept, and the county archives in the town of Fergus contained a diary written by a neighbor which told of the means and ways of the neighborhood in their time. According to the diary people there often walked ten miles to and ten miles from Guelph on Saturdays to fetch provisions I guess. Such walking was not unusual. A local history called Here and There in Eramosa said, concerning Martha Talbot's brother-in-law John Forester, that "Besides farming, he preached three times each Lord's Day, walking 16 miles in all kinds of weather over roads that were anything but easy to travel." I think of them when I watch people jockey for the closest parking spot at the grocery store!

The house of my great-great-great grandfather Richard Talbot near Everton, Ontario on the Eramosa Road just outside of Guelph. The Talbot family came in 1832 on the Brutus and settled on the land, building a log cabin. In the 1840s this stone farmhouse, in a style popular in Ireland, replaced the cabin. I was very pleased to see it still in its original design. Jerome Drummond photo

Rob Steward

When did you start researching your ancestors and what made you interested on genealogy?

I started doing verbal research when I was real young, about 7 or 8. When my grandmother, Mina Kalmbach Steward, would baby sit me, she'd tell me stories about her growing up in Freedom Township, Washtenaw County, and I would ask her more questions. This is also what started my interest in genealogy, which I call family research. I was fascinated by the stories she would tell, such as her being born in a log cabin near St. Thomas Lutheran Church in Freedom Township. She even took me out to where the cabin used to be and we looked around to see if any part of the foundation was left. She also said she didn't learn English until she went to school since only German was spoken at home.

Actual record research began when I was a teenager. While looking up church records, I started to notice that the same minister was involved even though the families I was researching went to different churches. That is how I also got interested in finding out more about Rev. Friedrich Schmid and the many churches he helped start in Michigan. Many of the records were in German and in the old style script. So with my friend, John Schmale, for help with the German, and a handwriting book for the old script, found at the Historical Society Museum in Frankenmuth, I managed to learn to decipher Rev. Schmid's handwriting.

What is the most surprising thing you've discovered in researching your genealogy? How did that discovery affect the way you view genealogy and did it have an effect on your attitude toward research?

I was surprised that some county clerks, cemetery personnel, pastors, or church secretaries seem to have a negative attitude toward genealogists. I was also surprised to learn that "public" records are not always public. So I had to figure out ways to work around those things and try other ways to get the information. Sometimes it made me angry, but it also taught me to have more patience.

In the time you've been doing genealogy, what is the worst brick wall you've encountered? Have you yet been able to work through it or around it? If so, how did you get "unstuck"?

My worst brick wall is trying to find the country and place of origin of my Steward line. I can't get them out of New Jersey in the 1700s. I still have had no success, although I did find a tree on ancestry that has a Baptism record of my great-great-great-grandfather, James J. Steward in 1804.

Tell us about your most gloriously successful moment in researching your genealogy.

There are a few. Finding the birthplace in England of my great-great-grandfather, William Gregory, mentioned in his obituary in the Dexter Leader newspaper from 1900. This led us to be able to visit the area on a trip to England and find more distant relations in my family.

Finding Rev. Schmid's Family Register, Baptism, Marriage, and Death records which include a lot of my ancestors in them. Going to Germany and England to see the villages where my ancestors were born and even meeting some of my distant cousins there.

Sheila Most

When did you start researching your ancestors and what made you interested on genealogy?

My ancestors first started to come to life for me when I was about eight or nine. My mother inherited some money from her great-aunt Lillie Green Reinhardt's estate. Lillie had died intestate and without issue, so her attorneys had a large family tree drawn up to determine which relatives would inherit and how much each would inherit by the generation to which they belonged. The copy of the family tree sent to my mother was almost a yard square with a gray background and writing in white. I was amazed to see that I actually had lots of relatives. You see, I was an only child; my mother's only sister never married and had no children; and my father's two brothers and their combined three sons still lived in the Chicago area, while we had moved to Florida when I was 14 months old to be near my maternal grandfather. My other three grandparents had died before my parents ever met, so I felt rather alone when all my friends had aunts and uncles and lots of cousins. Mom told me many family stories. But she died when I was twenty-one, so all I knew about her family I remembered from what she had told me before I went away to college. Over the years, Dad told me many of his family stories when I went home to visit him in Florida, and many of these I wrote down. I visited some of his relatives in the Chicago area when I was in grad school at Northwestern University and got more stories from them. I began to research my family history in 1974 when I was pregnant with my daughter. I guess I was trying to lay out a family background for her. But life intervened, and I didn't return to genealogy until I retired in 2012, and by then—thank heavens!—much of the information had been put online.

What is the most surprising thing you've discovered in researching your genealogy? How did that discovery affect the way you view genealogy and did it have an effect on your attitude toward research?

When I was a child, my father (Walter S. Most) told me that his father (Walter G. O. Most) had been a pitcher with the Chicago White Sox. [Ed Note Sheila's story about her surprising discovery is so interesting, we decided not to abbreviate it here, but will print it in its entirety in the next issue along with her meticulous four pages of footnotes!]

In the time you've been doing genealogy, what is the worst brick wall you've encountered? Have you yet been able to work through it or around it? If so, how did you get "unstuck"?

I have been totally unsuccessful in finding the parents and birthplace of my maternal 4x great-grandfather, Thomas (W?) Baird, Sr. (born about 1764 and died on 14 Mar 1844 in Logan County, OH [probably West Liberty]) and the surname of his wife, my maternal 4x great-grandmother, Nellie LNU Baird (born about 1765 and died in West Liberty, Logan County, Ohio on 24 Sep 1844). I can trace them back to Paris, Bourbon County, KY, where they had nine children, I can trace their line forward to Liberty Township, Champaign County, OH, and I can trace their descendants down to me. I know they were Scots-Irish Presbyterians (until their conversion), and I know that many Scots-Irish came from the old country to Pennsylvania and the Carolinas. I know that, in 1801, Thomas and Nellie and at least some of their children were among the almost 20,000-member Cane Ridge Revival (the Second Great Awakening) at Cane Ridge near Paris, Bourbon County, Kentucky where Barton Stone, among others, spoke so eloquently and convincingly. Soon afterwards, they "formed what they called the Christian Church, based on scripture rather than a creed representing the opinion of man" (Wikipedia). I know that Thomas and Nellie Baird and at least some of their children joined this new Christian Church (the modern Disciples of Christ). I know that, in 1808, they took their nine children and followed their minister to Liberty Township, Champaign County, Ohio, as one of the first twelve families of settlers there. They were among the founders of the Muddy Run (or Bethel) Church there. I can proceed forward with their line, but I am stymied in my search backward for their parents, their birthplace(s), Nellie's surname, and when and where Thomas and Nellie got married. Who were the immigrants from Northern Ireland: Thomas and Nellie Baird? or more likely, their parents? or their grandparents? Where did the immigrants land and where did they first settle? And how did they get to Paris, Bourbon County, Kentucky?

Tell us about your most gloriously successful moment in researching your genealogy.

Lola A Baird

When I was a child, my mom let me in on a family secret, but warned me never to mention it in front of my grandfather or ask him questions about it. Mom's sister was named Lola Jean, but she was always called "Jean" or "Aunt Jean"—never "Lola" or "Aunt Lola." It seemed very strange to me that her father, Grandpa Baird Stubbins, would have given her a name which no one was allowed to use—not even Aunt Jean herself. When I was older, I was let in on a bit more of the secret: "Lola" was Grandpa's mother's name, and she had died when he was just a boy. OK, I could understand why someone would want to name a child after his mother—but why not call his daughter by that name? Aunt Jean came to visit one time when I was a teenager, and I heard a bit more of the story. Aunt Jean had always wondered about her name, so, in 1934, she finally got up the nerve to ask her father to answer "the question." After much coaxing, she finally convinced him to tell her that, yes, Lola was his mother's name, but, when he was a boy in Chicago, Lola ran away with her lover, Potter Palmer (the wealthy businessman and philanthropist in Chicago, of Palmer House fame). The two had met while singing in the choir of the First Presbyterian Church near Lake Shore Blvd. Lola divorced her husband (my great-grandfather, Alfred Yates Stubbins), married her lover, died soon thereafter in childbirth, and is buried in Rosehill Cemetery in Chicago in the Palmer plot. Because she disgraced the family, she was never spoken of again. Grandpa Stubbins would tell Aunt Jean no more. Jean recorded this information in 1965, and I have a copy. Of course, once I started doing research in genealogy, I HAD to find out more about the story. Research soon told me that Grandpa's mother, Lola Baird Stubbins (aged 37) did not run away with either Potter Palmer, Sr., who would have been 70 at the time, or his son who would have been 21. Neither had Lola met her lover singing in the choir of the First Presbyterian Choir, since Palmer, Sr. was born a Quaker and attended St. James Episcopal Church when so moved to go to church.{Ed: Source listed on next lines] (http://search.proquest.com.proxy1.cl.msu.edu/hnpchicagotribune/docview/173067244/13D27C34AAC22E7881D/50?accountid=12598). Potter Palmer, Sr. had, however, purchased Rosehill Cemetery in Chicago on 02 Apr 1884 and is buried in nearby Graceland Cemetery. Either my Grandpa Stubbins wanted to elevate the standing of the man who, through wealth and fame, was able to seduce his mother or he mixed up Rosehill Cemetery's owner with the true name of Lola's lover. After much frustrating research, I found that Lola's lover was actually Ralph Walter Plummer—not Palmer—and was at the time a medical student at Rush University in Chicago. From the Chicago City Directories, I learned that Plummer had rented rooms across the street from Lola and her husband, and that's most likely how Lola and Plummer met—not in the more innocent way of singing together in a church choir.

Jerome Drummond is a member of the Genealogical Society of Washtenaw County, the Capers Editorial Team and the Ypsilanti Historical Society.

Rob Steward is the GSWC Corresponding Secretary, a GSWC Board Member and Cemetery Co-Chair.

Sheila Most is a Professor Emerita of Eastern Michigan University, retiring in 2012. She holds a Ph.D. in Germanic Philology, with Concentration in Old English, from Northwestern University, 1969 and an M.A. in German Language and Literature, from Northwestern University, 1966.

SECRETARY'S ANNUAL REPORT OF GERMAN FARMERS' MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY OF WASHTENAW COUNTY FOR THE YEAR 1946

Transcribed by Patty Baird

The material transcribed below was in a two-sided trifold document which was with several items purchased by Mr. David Doss at a sale and donated to the Genealogical Society of Washtenaw County. The information of genealogical interest was extracted from this document and placed in table format below providing the name, location, type of claim, and amount. Officers are also listed. One non-officer, a Mr. Herbert Witherell, was listed under expenses of $150.39 for envelopes and postage but was not included in the chart. [Ed Note: we have sorted the list by townships.]

The company is listed in annual reports from the Commissioner of Insurance for the State of Michigan in 1950s through the early 1960s. Its starting year was not discovered but the "office" location appears to have been R. R. 1 in Chelsea, Michigan per the listings in the annual reports.

REV. FRIEDRICH SCHMID'S MARRIAGE RECORDS, 1833-1875, ANN ARBOR, WASHTENAW COUNTY, MICHIGAN

(Part SIX)

Translated & transcribed by John H. Schmale, and Rob Steward, 1986
Reviewed and updated by Rob and Cyndy Steward, 2023

The original records of Rev. Friedrich Schmid are currently housed and may be accessed in The Michigan Historical Collections, Bentley Historical Library, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan. They also may be accessed online at https://deepblue.lib.umich.edu/handle/2027.42/99579 through M Library Deep Blue Documents: Record of Marriages, 1833-1871 (umich.edu) in PDF format. (Although labeled as ending in 1871 there are twenty-two entries in these records for the years 1872 to 1875).

Marriage records were not required to be registered with the Washtenaw County Clerk's Office until 1867 although some earlier records, back to 1832, are available at the county. The records at the county level usually appear by the date the records were turned in for recording, and in groups by the person who submitted the records for recording. (See Vol. 46, No.1, page 10 for a more detailed explanation concerning Rev. Schmid's records and the column format).

Rev. Schmid was not consistent in the way he spelled words, especially names. We have chosen to maintain the spelling Rev. Schmid used for the names of people. The records contain entries written in old German script and later, English script. In addition, while the marriages are listed chronologically by year, the pages in his records are not numbered.

By 1850, Rev. Schmid provides less information in his entries. He begins listing the names of the groom and bride; their ages in years; marital status; occasionally religion or occupation; and ends with the marriage date. We are extracting the information and placing it in a table format as follows:

Column 1: The chronological number of the marriage within each year
Column 2: SURNAME (in caps), first and middle name of the groom
Column 3: Groom's age in years
Column 4: additional information is the groom's (unless indicated by "Br" for the bride). It includes occupation; religion (other than protestant); and marital status (other than unmarried)
Column 5: Marriage date (DD/MMM/YYYY format)
Column 6: SURNAME (in caps), first and middle name of the bride
Column 7: Bride's age in years

Family Records
Record of several families by the name of Weld

The Rev. Thomas Weld, first pastor of the Church in Roxbury, Mass., came from Gateshead near Newcastle, England and was installed in July, 1632. He is said to have died in London, 1660-1.

Mr. Thomas Weld, one of the sons of the preceding, died in Roxbury in 1682. He had nine children.

The Rev. Thomas Weld, son of the above, was the first minister of Dunstable, N. H. Tradition says he was killed by Indians in 1702. His second wife was Mary Savage who died in 1731.

The Rev. Habijah Weld of Attleborough, Mass., son of Thomas and Mary, was born 2nd Sept, 1702; ordained 1st Oct., 1727, died 14th May, 1782. His wife was Mary Fox, daughter of the Rev. Jno. Fox of Woburn, Mass. She died 7th Jan., 1799, aged 93 years.

Their children were:

1. Mary
2. Judith
3. Dorothy
4. Elizabeth
5. Lucy
6. Thomas
7. Dr. Thomas
8. Sarah
9. Samuel
10. Hannah
11. Anna
12. Catherine
13. Dr. Samuel
14. Dr. John
15. Eunice

[Note in the Bible record: "For the above, see Alden's Collection."]

The Rev. Ezra Weld, who descended from the Roxbury family, (and whose mother's name was ____ Waldo) was born in Pomfret, Connecticut, in the year, 1736, June 13th, graduated at Yale College in 1759, was ordained, Nov. 17th, 1764, in early life, pastor of the Church in Braintree, Mass. and married Miss Anna Weld, his second cousin and daughter of the Rev. Habijah Weld. She was the mother of his first six children and died, July 10th, 1774, aged 31 years. Mr. Weld died January 16th, 1816 in Braintree.

Mr. Weld was four times married. His last three wives were Hannah Farnham, daughter of Col. ____ Farnham of Newburyport; Abigail Greenleaf, daughter of Judge ____ Greenleaf, of Boston and Mrs. Mary Fuller, widow of Dr. Fuller of Plympton, Mass.

The children of the Rev. Ezra and Mrs. Anna Weld [1st wife] were:

1. Ezra Waldo Weld, born Thursday, April 25th, 1765, died in N. York City, April 24th, 1818.
2. The Rev. Ludovicus Weld born Friday, Sept. 12th, 1766.
3. Elizabeth Weld born Thursday, June 2nd, 1768, died June 14th, 1778.

4. Samuel Weld, born Wednesday, May 9th, 1770.
5. Dr. Elias Weld born Wednesday, March 11th, 1772.
